Youngsters dig their bright new workwear

YOUNGSTERS taking part in archeological digs at a popular site will now look the part, thanks to a donation of high-visibility jackets and hard hats.

Bring Yer Wellies, of Quaker Brook Lane, Hoghton, is popular with children from across the country for archaeological digs.

The rural education venture, run by Melissa and Nigel Peter, has been given a bright boost after Smart Image Workwear donated equipment for children visiting the project.

To mark the handover of the work gear, children from classes three and four at Coupe Green Primary School spent an afternoon at the dig, where they were joined by Bill Rawlinson from Smart Image.

Bring Yer Wellies has more than 30 original Roman artefacts from Canterbury Archaeological Trust which are buried at the dig site so children are able to find an item to record and investigate.

To add to the fun, Melissa's friend, Jane Fox, from Fired4U, of Bamber Bridge, made three Greek items in her pottery studio which were then smashed up and buried for the children to find.
